Section 45a ASOG

Data transfer for the purpose of background checks for major events

(1) In the event that background checks are required due to the particular threats posed by major events, the police can transfer personal data to public and non-public offices; if the individuals in question have consented in writing to such act and if such transfer is reasonable with a view to checking, especially access by the individual in question to the event; with a view to the recipient’s justified security interests as well as due to the type and scope of the intelligence regarding the individual in question. Such transfer of data is limited to information regarding the security concerns that exist. Prior to the written consent, the police must inform the individuals in question about the specific contents of the data transfer and its recipients unless the individuals in question have already been informed through other channels. Data transfer according to sentence 1 regarding the individuals referred to in section 53 (1) sentence 1 number 5 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure (Strafprozessordnung) will not take place when such individuals underwent background checking in the past 12 months by another police authority of the federal government or of a federal state.

(2) The recipient may use the data transferred solely for the purpose of the background check. The police are required to oblige the recipient in writing to observe such intended purpose.

(3) Berlin’s Commissioner for Data Protection and Freedom of Information must be notified if data transfer is intended for an event as contemplated in paragraph 1.

Section 50 ASOG

Right to information

(1) The public authorities and the police are required, when requested, to provide the individual in question free of charge, with information about the data stored related to them. The application for information should state in detail the type of data for which information is being requested. When requesting information from files, it may be necessary to demand that details be given that enable the data to be found without the need for effort that is out of proportion to the interest in information claimed by the individual in question. If the individual in question fails to meet the demand, the application may be rejected.

(2) There is no obligation to provide information as long as an evaluation shows that the weighting of the interests of the individual in question which deserve protection is subordinate to the public interest in non-disclosure or a third-party's predominant interest in non-disclosure.
